3. If you were a president, prime minister, or a leader of your country. Describe five things you would do to improve your country.

1. Electricity

If I was a president I would provide the following.

Electricity for ironing clothes so that people can look smart.

people use electricity for light that helps them to see.

people use electricity for charging phones.

2. Tax:

I would encourage people to pay tax so that the government of Uganda can get money to construct roads, schools, hospitals, water improves on the country's economy and to construct power dams of which the power dams produce electricity for rural electrification.

Schools constructed by the government reduce the number of illiterate people in the country.

Roads constructed by the government are used for transport that connect people to highways.

Hospitals constructed by the government provide medical care to the people of Uganda. They also teach people about sanitation and help women to deliver babies.
