

Boy Who Speaks Six Languages Wins Place at Top Japanese Uni. 15/1/12

I am writing about this interesting topic because I am extremely interested with what this young black boy has achieved in life. I have read the amazing article and know an important fact. Also, I realise how important it is to learn a language in case you go to that country where they speak that language often.

A young British boy age eighteen-years-old taught himself Japanese and five other languages has won a high standard scholarship to a top Far East university. I like the fact that he got a scholarship to a top Far East university which is brilliant.

Eighteen-year-old Quarmelle Kurpo, who also speaks English, Korean, Mandarin, Russian, and French, is to leave the UK on September 16th and will spend four years in Japan at Osaka university in Japan's third largest city. I actually feel very sad for Quarmelle because he travels on an aeroplane on his own across the world.

Quarmelle is very excited about the opportunity of going to Japan and facing challenges. Quarmelle has worked extremely hard for this and this is his chance. Quarmelle will be out there initially for four ~~two~~ years or more. I would not like to stay in Japan for four years or more. I would like to stay quite close to my family than a great distance and especially when none of your family is in that specific country.
