

4 A community is a group of individuals connected to each other by one or more attributes. What binds people together is called Care and is the essence of the group connected with Unity by a familiar thread which is honestly a common Unity as a suffix.

It is important to note that a community saves us from isolations and alienations. This is because a community is referred to as a community because of the group of people that stays or lives in it. People work together as one family in case of a community work especially during an outbreak of any disease that is to say communicable disease like cholera people work together to kick it out of their communities; Another good example where people unite for a common cause is in case of breakage of a bridge, construction of a temporary road, taking the sick to the health facilities. This makes a community vital to our well being.

Sweetly enough, in the real world people have no choice because community is about finding each other and a place we can call home. In good faith each and every community has got its kind of people for instance the people who stay at lake shores have their own behaviours and so likewise people who stay on mountaineous places like mount Kilimanjaro in Kenya, mount Rwenzori in Uganda, people who stay in towns. All the above communities are important to different people depending on where they belong.
