Why is it important to know where your food comes from?

It is important to know where your food comes from for many different reasons:

1 When you know where your food comes from i.e. when you are growing it yourself, you are independent, you don't have to rely on other people for producing your food etc.

2 Also when you know where your food comes from, how it's made etc. then no-one can do genetic mutations, or make your food unorganic if you don't want it to be. also if you don't want there to be, there won't be any type of slave or child labour because it would be transparent - no-one can sneak things upon you because you already know the going-ons and you control how it happens.

However when you don't know properly where your food comes from anyone can do anything to your food and you won't know, just like ISDS they can make a law or make the government change a law that has an impact on your life, and you wouldn't even know about it.
