

Omara Michael James.

Land grabbing is almost grabbing the life of a person (people) for which this land is the livelihood of most the people in Africa today.

In my Opinion this land grabbing is unnecessary and this caused by some of the following reasons in my own view;

Firstly, I think it this greed for large amount of funds by the ones in power (the ruling government) this makes them to give the land for the locals without their permission or knowledge of which this is so detrimental to own survival.

Because this land is all what we have for the day to day sustenance.

Secondly, I suggest that the bad governance, corruption that is in most of African countries is also responsible for this land grabbing. In most of our countries the rule is ever authoritarian and harsh were you find democracy just theoretical but not practical.

In addition to that the policies of some of our countries make the people voiceless on the matter of land especially the constitution of Uganda where the people have no voice on the land matters. In case the government needs land, no one can stand and face the government because you will never overcome or win the case.

There is also high rate of corruption among the states. This is in such away that when big companies take over your land you find that the courts are corrupted to make justice in favour of them. This is afterwards highly increasing injustice causing this land to grabbing.

In my Opinion I think there can be the parti-
