My people always co-operate with each other to rise against this issue of land grabbing though there is always some leaders shying down because they are corrupted.

For instance, They wanted to sell off Mabina Forest to investors for sugarcane plantation and Sugar Factory. Though some members of Parliament were corrupted some only a few like Beatrice Anywar the woman representative of Arua opposed the idea and with the efforts of the locals the forest was rescued from the hands of greedy leaders who had leased it to the investors.

Secondly, The land in Otuke District was also about to be given or grabbed by the ruling government for their own investment for farm of livestock but the people rose against them and also recovered their land.

In nutshell, I conclude that if the Government doesnot change their attitude towards her people and start defending them against the land grabbers all these will never be solved and if we can ^{only} co-operate and stand altogether against land grabbing by foreign investors, we shall all at once come to the end of land grabbing.

Together we shall stand and divided we shall fall.
Africans "no to land grabbing" we shall say.
